Hello Jamie

Thanks for sharing, some comments about your literature review :

The statement "we selected the most relevant papers based on the following criteria:" should be revised to adhere to an impersonal writing style, avoiding the use of personal pronouns.

Regarding in-text citations, the example "Early approaches to sign language recognition used robotic-like data/power gloves which were wired, with sensors to capture hand movements and gestures Saeed et al. (2022)" should be reformulated to incorporate the citation within the sentence. Refer to the guidelines provided at

<https://www.canterbury.ac.uk/asset-library/library/harvard.pdf> for assistance. For instance, you might write, "According to Saeed et al. (2022), early approaches to sign language recognition utilized robotic-like data/power gloves with wired sensors to capture hand movements and gestures."

The Historical Context section could be reorganised to begin with a discussion of the datasets used, followed by any preprocessing undertaken, then the ML algorithms employed, and finally, an exploration of the different performance metrics used along with the results. While discussing in this sequence, reference can be made to Table 1.

It appears that citations for Image-based methods (3.4.1) and Video-based methods (3.4.2) are missing. Ensure that these sections are appropriately cited.

The discussion of ML models in history and within the "Comparative Analysis of Machine Learning Models" section could potentially be consolidated into a single cohesive section for improved clarity and coherence.

Best wishes
